RIGHT OF APPEAL AND DETERMINATION OF APPEALS.

5. Any person convicted on indictment may appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal —

Right of Appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal.

(a) against his conviction, on any ground which involves a question of law alone;

(b) if a female convicted of an offence punishable with death, from the finding of a jury on proceedings under section one hundred and sixty-two A of the Criminal Law (Procedure) Ordinance, as substituted by section twenty-one of the Criminal Justice Ordinance, 1932, that she is not pregnant.

Cap. 18.
No. 21 of 1932.

(c) with the leave of the Court of Criminal Appeal, or upon the certificate of the trial judge that it is a fit case for appeal, against his conviction on any ground of appeal which involves a question of fact alone, or a question of mixed law and fact, or any other ground which appears to the Court to be a sufficient ground of appeal; and

(d) with the leave of the Court of Criminal Appeal, against sentence, unless the sentence is one fixed by law.

6. (1) The Court of Criminal Appeal on any appeal against conviction shall allow the appeal if they think that the verdict of the jury should be set aside on the ground that it is unreasonable or cannot be supported having regard to the evidence, or that the judgment of the Court before whom the appellant was convicted should be set aside on the ground of a wrong decision of any question of law, or that on any ground there was a miscarriage of justice, and in any other case shall dismiss the appeal:

Determination of appeals

Provided that the Court of Criminal Appeal may, notwithstanding that they are of the opinion that the point raised in the appeal might be decided in favour of the appellant, dismiss the appeal if they are of the opinion that no substantial miscarriage of justice has actually occurred.

(2) Subject to the provisions of this Ordinance, the Court of Criminal Appeal shall, if they allow an appeal, either quash the conviction and direct a judgment and verdict of acquittal to be entered, or if the interests of justice so require, order a new trial.

(3) On any appeal against sentence the Court of Criminal Appeal shall, if they think a different sentence should have been passed, quash the sentence passed at the trial, and pass such other sentence (whether more or less severe) as they think ought to have been passed.

7. (1) If it appears to the Court of Criminal Appeal that an appellant, though not properly convicted on some count or part of the indictment, has been properly convicted on some other count or part of the indictment, the Court may either affirm the sentence passed on the appellant at the trial, or substitute therefor such other sentence as they may think proper, having regard to the count or part of the indictment on which the Court considers that the appellant has been properly convicted.

(2) Where an appellant has been convicted of an offence, and the jury could on the indictment have found him guilty of some other offence, and on the finding of the jury it appears to the Court of Criminal Appeal that the jury must have been satisfied of facts which proved him guilty of that other offence, the Court may instead of allowing or dismissing the appeal substitute for the verdict found by the jury a verdict of guilty of that other offence, and pass such sentence in substitution for the sentence passed at the trial as may be warranted in law for that other offence, not being a sentence of greater severity.

(3) Where on the conviction of the appellant the jury have found a special verdict, and the Court of Criminal Appeal consider that a wrong conclusion has been arrived at by the Court before which the appellant has been convicted on the effect of that verdict, the Court of Criminal Appeal may, instead of allowing the appeal, order such conclusion to be recorded as appears to the Court to be in law required by the verdict, and pass such sentence in substitution for the sentence passed at the trial as may be warranted in law.

(4) If, on any appeal it appears to the Court of Criminal Appeal that although the appellant was guilty of the act or omission charged against him he was insane at the time the act was done or omission made so as not to be responsible according to law for his actions, the Court may quash the sentence passed at the trial and order the appellant to be kept in custody as a criminal lunatic under the provisions of section one hundred and seventy-three of the Criminal Law (Procedure) Ordinance in the same manner as if a special verdict had been found by the jury under that Ordinance.

8. (1) The operation of any order for the restitution of any property to any person made on a conviction on indictment, and the operation, in case of any such conviction, of the provisions of subsection (1) of section twenty-six of the Sale of Goods Ordinance, as to the re-vesting of the property in stolen goods on conviction shall (unless the Court before whom the conviction takes place directs to the contrary in any case in which in their opinion, the title to the property is not in dispute) be suspended —

(a) in any case until the expiration of ten days after the date of the conviction; and

(b) in case where notice of appeal or leave to appeal is given within ten days after the date of conviction until the determination of the appeal, and in cases where the operation of any such order, or the operation of the said provisions is suspended until the determination of the appeal, the order or the provisions as the case may be shall not take effect as to the property in question if the conviction is quashed on appeal.

(2) Pending the suspension of the operation of any order of restitution as aforesaid, or the suspension of the provisions of subsection (1) of section twenty-six of the Sale of Goods Ordinance, the Court before whom any person has been convicted on indictment may make such order as it may think fit for securing the safe custody of any property in respect of which such person has been convicted.

(3) The Court of Criminal Appeal may by order annul or vary any order made on a trial for the restitution of any property to any person, although the conviction is not quashed; and the order, if annulled, shall not take effect, and, if varied, shall take effect as so varied.

9. Where upon conviction of any person of any offence any disqualification, forfeiture or disability attaches to such person by reason of such conviction, such disqualification, forfeiture or disability shall not attach — Suspension of disqualification etc. pending appeal.

(a) for the period of ten days after the date of conviction of such person; and

(b) where notice of appeal or leave to appeal is given within ten days after the date of conviction of such person, until the determination of the appeal.
